Helping educational providers deliver a better service is the aim behind the world's first international management system standard for the sector just published. From pre-school to university, to vocational training and coaching, the world of learning is constantly changing and evolving.

As the trend to move away from the traditional customer-supplier relationship towards a collaborative partnership grows, so, too, do learners' expectations. Learning providers now need to adapt to these new ways of working, while at the same time providing a high level of service.

Education is not only a basic right, but a fundamental part of society, so the quality of educational providers is everyone's concern.

Around the world, education quality varies significantly. This means that in some cases, learners are not receiving the best level of education available.

As an Educational Organization Management System (EOMS), ISO 21001 attempts to address this problem.

Overview

While an educational organization can never guarantee the success of its learners, there are a number of ways that it can more effectively meet their needs and contribute to better learning outcomes.

The future standard will also help educational providers align their activities effectively with their mission and vision and offer more personalized learning.

ISO 21001, Educational organizations – Management systems for educational organizations – Requirements with guidance for use, is a management system standard that is partially aligned with ISO 9001:2015 for quality management systems. It provides a common management tool for educational organizations aiming to improve their processes and address the needs and expectations of those who use their services.
